3-Alarm Fire at Eastern Shore Forest Products

A fire at the Eastern Shore Forest Products facility in Somerset County has caused an estimated $5.5 million in damages on September 6. The three-alarm blaze broke out just after 11:30 pm according to the state fire marshal's office. Firefighters from Maryland, Virginia and Delaware responded to the fire taking nine hours to extinguish the fire.

Eastern Shore Forest Products is an MHC business member (corporate name Animal Comfort Group, LLC) that makes animal bedding and energy pellets. President Tom Johnson stated on the company's Facebook page that the company has contingency plans in place for such disasters and hoped to be back to full capacity within two weeks. The cause of the fire is still under investigation. No one was injured.

Equine Rabies Case in Maryland

On September 2, the Maryland Department of Agriculture confirmed a five-year-old Warmblood gelding in Montgomery County was euthanized due to a confirmed case of rabies. The horse had been showing signs of aggression and tested positive for rabies. Maryland and Virginia health departments across several counties have notified people who were potentially exposed. Two horses that have been exposed were previously vaccinated. They received boosters and were placed under a 45-day hold order.

Marylanders Win Big at Dressage Championships

Sara Hassler and Hannah Irons both won top honors at this year's Dressage National Championships.

Hassler, of Chesapeake City, won the Ad-equan/USEF Young Adult Brentina Cup National Championship riding Harmony's Boitano, owned by Hassler and Leslie Malone. Hassler and Boitano won the first test but had a few bobbles in their second test. It was their freestyle test that clinched them the championship title with an overall score of 69.269%.

Irons, of Queenstown, rode Scola Bella to win the Horseware Ireland/USEF Young Rider Dressage National Championship. The pair won the class with a score of 73.088%. Irons leases Scola Bella from Dressage4Kids, Inc. and also earned the overall top score with a 71.471%.

Century Ride: Dottie Wolf & Impressive Suzy

Dottie Wolf and Impressive Suzy completed a Century Ride on September 18 at Petticoat's Advance dressage show in Upperco. The Century Ride is for riders and horses that have a combined age of 100 or more years. Wolf is 71.5 years old and her Quarter Horse mare Impressive Suzy is 28.5 years old. "Suzy is the most wonderful horse and I wanted to honor her. She has been the greatest friend and we continue to have fun together," Wolf said.

Racing Integrity & Safety Act Update

The Horseracing Integrity and Safety Act passed out of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce on September 9, following a bipartisan 46-5 vote. The bill is now poised to move to a House floor vote.

The bill, H.R. 1754, advanced with amendments that match legislation introduced in the Senate. The Senate legislation adopted many reform measures proposed in the original House bill, while adding additional track safety measures and programs to establish safety standards for training and racing, racetrack surfaces, injury-related data analysis, safety violation investigations, hearings, and sanctions.

The bill provides federal recognition and enforcement power for a Horseracing Integrity and Safety Authority to design and implement uniform national horse racing medication and racetrack safety standards. The Authority would be an independent, non-governmental regulatory body responsible for setting national standards for track safety, anti-doping and medication rules, and lab protocols.

There is widespread support for the bill among Thoroughbred groups, but the United States Trotting Association has announced its opposition to several elements of the proposed legislation. In a statement, USTA said, "While the United States Trotting Association (USTA) strongly supports state-regulated, breed-specific, uniform medication rules for horse racing, the USTA strongly opposes the HISA for a number of reasons and sees several areas of significant concern to the Standardbred racing industry." In particular, USTA objects to the ban on race-day use of Lasix, and argues that the funding mechanism for the new regulatory authority would fall disproportionately and unfairly on the harness industry. In addition, USTA objects to the mandated drug-testing authority being delegated to a private company that has no background in animal testing.

Heavenly Cause & What a Summer Enter MD TB Hall of Fame

This year's inductees to the Maryland-bred Thoroughbred Hall of Fame are distaffers Heavenly Cause and What a Summer. Selected by a committee of Maryland racing industry members coordinated by the Maryland Horse Breeders Association and Maryland racing Media Association, the two grays excelled at the national level.

What a Summer won the 1977 Eclipse Award for Champion Sprinter. That year, the filly won six out of eight starts while also defeating males. She won the Fall Highweight Handicap (G2) under 134 lbs, which at the time was one of the biggest tests for the nation's top sprinters.

Heavenly Cause was the top two-year-old filly in the nation in 1980 when she won both the Grade 1 Selima and Frizette Stakes. She went on to win a total of seven career stakes races including the Kentucky Oaks at three. She was named the Maryland-bred Champion Filly for her two- and three-year-old seasons.

D.C. Police Disband Mounted Unit

On August 21, WJLA reported that the Metropolitan Police Department confirmed that the D.C. mounted police unit is being disbanded. A spokesperson for the department told WJLA the changes were due to recent budget cuts by the D.C. City Council.

Diversity Scholarship Follow Up

In this issue on page 17, you will read a series of interviews with the three Maryland riders who were among the winners of Nation Media's inaugural Diversity Scholarship. After these initial interviews were conducted, the owner of the Plantation Field in Unionville, PA, canceled the lease of the property held by Plantation Field Equestrian Events, Inc., stating they were terminating the running of horse trials at their property due to pressure received from Eventing Nation and USEA to change the name of the farm and event.

According to Denis Glaccum, President of Plantation Field Equestrian Events, Inc., the word "Plantation" in this case refers to the long history the farm has with trees and hedges being planted in the fields by a local Boy Scout troop. Glaccum stated in a September 16 press release, "Colonial Pennsylvania considered properties less than 100 acres a farm and properties with more than 100 acres a plantation. There is no reference to race in this definition. The Unionville area is historically a Quaker community. The Quakers were one of the earliest abolitionist groups and fought against slavery. This area was also part of the underground railroad."

ment on behalf of the USEA on September 17, "Having this historic competition close isn't the right result for the sport, and the United States Eventing Association (USEA) is working hard to find a solution. The organizer and landowners operate exceptional events on a beautiful piece of land. We are deeply sensitive to the history of the word "plantation" and its connection to slavery; however, this property has no known connections to slavery and was instead named after 'plantings' on the property. We understand that neither the organizer nor the landowners have ever intended to cause any discomfort related to the name of the event and to imply otherwise is a disservice to our organizers, landowners, and our sport. The USEA does not have the ability to require an event to change its name as we are required to carry the US Equestrian (USEF) licensed name of the competition on our calendar of events. However, we are hopeful that an acceptable solution to this issue can be reached."

In response to the issue over Plantation Field, Helen Casteel, one of the scholarship winners interviewed for The Equiery's October article, wrote a letter to Eventing Nation's Editor-in-Chief, Leslie Wylie, asking if any people of color in the eventing community were involved with the decision to approach the owners and campaign to change the name. In her letter, Casteel suggested, "Instead of pushing for the name change and having the conflict with organizers and owners escalate, I would have requested a simple paragraph be permanently placed on the website, show brochure and any other official publication noting the history of the word 'Plantation' in this country; explaining the actual meaning behind the name 'Plantation Field' along with clear statement that all races, genders, and religions are welcome."

In addition, Casteel wrote in her letter, "On a personal level, this situation puts me in an uncomfortable position. My horse is recovering from an injury so we aren't doing any recognized horse trials this year. Next year I'm worried that people will look at me at shows and think I'm part of the reason Plantation Field isn't running anymore. I'm now feeling more like an outsider than I ever have."

Dawn Edgerton-Cameron, also featured in this month's article, issued the following statement to The Equiery, "Regarding the recent developments surrounding the Unionville event. I think it's sad that rather than engage in a dialog that considers how one's brand is viewed through the lens of both current events and historical context as others have done recently (i.e., Brown and Cornell Universities, the state of Rhode Island), that the leadership of one of the premier events in the nation instead chose to throw a temper tantrum. The former approach would have uplifted not only their status as leaders on the issue they say they care about and positioned them, I believe, on the right side of history."

"Instead, while this is a temporary blow to Area II and the surrounding areas, I am confident that the eventing community will establish another in its place as they have when other iconic events have shut down. In the meantime, if we are to move ahead as a community and as a society, we need to be willing to have difficult conversations on sensitive topics in a civil matter, and without knee-jerk reactions. In the meantime, let us all remember that words matter. Representation matters. Thoughtfulness matters."

To read our interviews with these two Marylanders, as well as polo player Lea Jih-Vieira, see page 17 of this issue.

The Equiery's ~~Global~~ Scrapbook

From staycations to vacations, Equiery readers found creative ways to spend some quality time with family and friends this summer. Here are a few travel photos from our Equiery readers.

Connie Baker made a day trip to Assateague Island National Seashore to visit with the ponies.

Alyssa Peddicord took a horseback tour through the Ozarks of Mountain View, Arkansas.

Beth Collier visited Sotterley House and its gardens in Hollywood, MD.

Marie Downey and friends took a hack through the historic Gettysburg National Military Park in PA.

Before the world shut down due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Dr. Linda Molesworth and Mary Russell of Lucky Cricket Farm rode through the Andes Mountains. They are pictured here at the Argentine/Chilean border in January 2020.

Daphne Schauber enjoyed a summer evening sunset while riding Misty at Valley Meadows Farm B&B in Hancock.

As of press, Paige Erudite Turner still hadn't come back from the beaches of Rhode Island!

Sandra Cartagena Powell found some different four-legged friends while traveling through Capon Spring, WV.

Alex Abella and friends spots a lone pony running across the beach at Assateague Island National Seashore while setting up for a summer evening bonfire.

Speaking Up for Diversity in the Horse World

by Katherine O. Rizzo

In the September News & Views section of The Equiery we reported on Nation Media's Diversity Scholarship. This month, we have followed up with the three Maryland scholarship winners asking them to share their stories on why they applied for the scholarship and what sort of feedback they have received since their stories were published on eventingnation.com.

Each woman represents different backgrounds, different experiences and different view points, but together, along with all 21 scholarship winners, they offer first steps towards a more inclusive competitive horse world.

Helen Casteel

Helen Casteel of Silver Spring first sat on a horse as a teenager in Massachusetts when she followed a friend to a local barn and started taking lessons. "My dad was a mailman and would pick me up after school in his mail truck and drop me at the barn for lessons," she said with a chuckle. "I just liked horses and wouldn't let it go. The place was an eventing barn and I just loved it!"

Casteel did not actively start competing in eventing until much later in life when she purchased her first horse and began boarding at Waredaca in Laytonsville. "That's when I got serious about the sport," she said. "I'm not a professional [eventer] in any way, but that's ok." Casteel has competed at many different Area II venues, rode at the 2019 American Eventing Championships in Kentucky and spent part of this past winter in Florida.

Casteel stated in her scholarship essay that she feels "very fortunate in my experiences as a Black woman in the horse worlds and specifically as an Eventer. I've always ridden at racially diverse barns and am based now at a place where I've only felt welcome and safe as I train and compete." Casteel went on to write that "being the one that looks different from everyone else is something I've gotten used to but I'm lucky to not have to worry too much about it. Unfortunately, not all other BIPOC in equestrian sport have been as lucky as I have."

This is the reason why she decided to apply for the Diversity Scholarship. "When I first heard about it, I wasn't going to do the essay," she said. "This [diversity issue] has been happening for years and it has been very easy for most people, as in white people, to not think about it. I started to think 'come on guys, you knew these things were going on and haven't done anything about it.'"

So Casteel began to write her essay, not so much for the scholarship money but because of the platform being offered to speak out on the issue of diversity. "This scholarship idea was a good way to get more people to come forward and share their thoughts," she added.

Overall the feedback Casteel has received since being one of this year's winners has been positive. "Everyone has been lovely," she said, adding, "People I haven't heard from in a while have reached out to me because of the essay." One such friend told her, "having this come from you made me think of things a bit differently," which Casteel feels is the perfect starting point, stating that thoughts on diversity need to change.

Looking back at her essay, Casteel does wish she had spent more time talking about the history of Black Americans in shaping the horse world across the country. "I could have talked so much more about Bass Reeves. I mean he IS the Lone Ranger," she stated. "The Black community's contribution to the horse world across the country is so much more than people think." It is changing the way people think about minorities and horses that will begin to make a difference.

But as Casteel stated in the conclusion of her essay, "However real change will only happen when white people truly prioritize diversity and representation efforts. This has to become your problem to solve."

Dawn Edgerton-Cameron

As a young girl growing up in Queens, New York, all Dawn Edgerton-Cameron really wanted was a cat. "I don't know why, but I just kept begging my parents for a cat and read all the books on cats I could find," she remembered. "And then I moved onto dogs but the answer was still always no."

Somewhere along the line, Edgerton-Cameron's animal obsession turned to horses and her parents said no to buying a horse but after her family moved to Long Island, NY, she was able to start taking some riding lessons. "I think they liked the idea that the horses couldn't actually come live with us," she said with a laugh.

The first barn she rode at taught Western so that is where her equestrian journey started. She eventually moved to a hunt seat barn and then road for Brown University's Intercollegiate Horse Show Association team. "I remember the exact moment I learned about [the sport of] Eventing," she said, "It was watching the 1984 Olympics. I just really loved the idea of being able to do a sport where you got out of the ring."

Now living in Annapolis, Edgerton-Cameron jumped head first into the Area II eventing scene while dabbling in competitive trail riding with her trainer's, Dyanna Capuano, off-the-track Thoroughbred.

Edgerton-Cameron also was hesitant to write a scholarship essay at first. "I had been watching the comments online and I don't mean this to be harsh but with my busy schedule, I just didn't feel the scholarship amount was worth the time," she explained. Edgerton-Cameron is a financial advisor currently working on transitioning to starting her own firm. "I just knew if I was going to write anything, it would end up being a long commitment because I wanted to not just address the problem at hand but give a way through to achieve an end goal," she added.

As more and more sponsors added their support to the scholarship fund, Capuano kept pushing her student to share her story. "Fourteen hours and five pages later I had my thoughts written down," Edgerton-Cameron said with a chuckle. "And even now as I re-read what I sent in, I keep wanting to add to it and change a word here and there."

Edgerton-Cameron's essay reads exactly as she intended. Looking at the issue of diversity from an MBA mindset, she addressed four key factors and lists many ways to “fix” each factor. The key factors she lists in her essay are exposure, opportunity, perception and reception. “I wanted to bring something to the table that was more than just my personal experiences. I wanted to be able to share some solutions,” she said.

Presenting solutions is what most motivated Edgerton-Cameron to submit an essay saying, “we need steps on how individual horse people can move forward and make a difference.”

Edgerton-Cameron received feedback immediately from Eventing Nation Editor-In-Chief Leslie Wylie before the essay was ever formally published. “Leslie sent me an email back saying ‘I just read your essay four times’ and ‘wow,’” Edgerton-Cameron shared.

Once posted online, Edgerton-Cameron stated the feedback has started more and more conversations. She herself is even learning more about other people of color in equestrian sports. “I’ve learned just how many riders of color there are in this sport. I am not alone!” she explained, adding, “there is an entire community out there spread out across the country!”

On a personal level, Edgerton-Cameron has joined several Facebook groups related to riders of color since the scholarship was announced. “If we continue to come together, we can really make a difference,” she said. Edgerton-Cameron also added, “I really do mean what I wrote in that essay about wanting to join committees addressing this area of conversation. I’m here and willing to do my part.”

Deena Jih

Polo player Lea Jih-Vieira of Middletown

Lea Jih-Vieira

Seeing as how this Diversity Scholarship was first announced on Eventing Nation’s website, polo player Lea Jih-Vieira did not think she was eligible to apply. “I get the EN emails and saw one that said ‘scholarship’ and clicked through,” she said. “It was interesting to find out that [the scholarship] was open to all disciplines, not just eventing.”

Jih-Vieira, who is of Chinese and Portuguese descent, remarked that as a child, her mother really wanted her to join some sort of sport. “She tried everything... soccer, softball... I just would sit down and refuse to play,” she said. “Then she signed me up for a riding lesson and I just loved it!”

Her riding beginning was at a show hunter barn but then she tried polo briefly before getting into barrel racing. “Then in high school I started riding polo with Mountain View Polo and just stuck with it,” she stated. “I’m 100% a polo player now!”

Now playing varsity polo at Cornell University as a sophomore, the Middletown native said, “I personally haven’t seen many Asian players in polo. They are mostly white and then Hispanic. I can count on one hand how many Asian polo players I’ve seen.”

Jih-Vieira addressed in her essay the financial divide that is present in polo as well as many other equestrian sports. “Equestrian sports in general are expensive and to be really competitive in polo, you really need a string of good horses, which just triples the expenses,” she explained. “This is why I really wanted to focus on the socioeconomic problems with the sport in general.”

In her essay, she wrote, “The underlying issue why we have a lack of diversity in equestrian sport amounts to a socioeconomic issue. The historic systems in place, meant to limit people of color, are so interwoven in the fabric of our country that we may not even realize how much they influence our lives today.” She also wrote, “To make equestrian sport more inclusive, we must be mindful of the struggles of these communities.”

Jih-Vieira put out a challenge of sorts to organizations such as the U.S. Eventing Association and U.S. Polo Association to do their part in breaking down barriers for low-income individuals entering the sport. She suggested, “By allocating money to help this population of aspiring equestrians start their careers, these organizations are not only supporting these individuals, but are setting an example for everyone in the community.”

She told The Equiery, “I know there were a lot of comments on Facebook criticizing the amount of this scholarship but the thought is good and they needed to start somewhere.”

Union Bridge

28+ Acres

Spring Hollow Farm is an amazing piece of Carroll County History that is reluctantly offered for sale. The original log portion of this home dates from the 1700s and the brick portion dates from 1840. This 4 bedroom, 2 1/2-bathroom home has been meticulously and lovingly maintained (inside and out) and appreciated for its original features while updated for modern conveniences. Original wide-plank pine floors, original chestnut paneling, 5 fireplaces, whole house generator, updated custom kitchen with granite counter tops and a spring fed pond with a variety of fish just to name a few. This very private oasis also includes a spring house, smoke house and a 3 bay barn with attached shed. The grounds (28+ acres) are a blank slate with ample acreage to start your agriculture/livestock enterprise. A private driveway takes you through rolling hills, woods and pastures/hay fields to the main home. The view from the house to the pond is quite lovely whether you are sitting in the kitchen or enjoying your coffee on the screened-in porch. Location is commuter friendly to Baltimore and Washington. This property is divided into 3 parcels which may have the ability for additional lots and is eligible for agriculture preservation funds. Please check with Carroll County Government to confirm. NO SIGN ON PROPERTY. PLEASE DO NOT DRIVE ONTO PROPERTY WITHOUT AN APPOINTMENT. $749,000

MARYLAND WILL MISS...

Dolly von Stade Bostwick, Jr.

Submitted by J.B. Secor

Dolly von Stade Bostwick was an avid horse-woman and a devoted mother. She passed on June 20 at her home in Indiantown, Florida, at the age of 66. Dolly was born in New York City to the famed amateur jockey, trainer and polo player G.H. "Pete" Bostwick and mother Dolly von Stade Bostwick.

Dolly was a very successful rider of show ponies in her early years and spent much of her childhood between Aiken, South Carolina, and Long Island, New York. She was the apple of her father's eye. As a matter of fact, Dolly could do no wrong in her father's mind. I saw that first hand when I was down in Aiken, South Carolina, showing Bostwick ponies myself. I was only one year older than Dolly.

She went on to the Foxcroft School but decided to go into horse racing instead of the institute that Foxcroft had to offer. Dolly once told the New York Times that she was a "jockey, not a debutante."

Dolly also had a keen eye for discovering young horses and became quite successful at picking yearlings and running through two-year-olds in training sales. Her horsemanship was respected by many and she rode and trained at many well-known race tracks all along the East Coast.

Dolly has left us in her life yet her spirit and her legend will still be well remembered by all of us. She was from a different cut of cloth. Yet from the kind of cloth I most love. Dolly we will miss you.

Fond farewell to former MHC members and Equiery advertisers Shelly and Dave Buhlman who have retired to Maine. (pictured) berino began steeplechase riding in 2016 in the Medium Pony flat races. He moved up the pony ranks and into the junior horse divisions where he rode in the Junior Field Master Chases on a horse named Ben. He raced a total of thirteen times over three Maryland Steeplechase Association Governor's Cup seasons.

Baltimore Arabber Ophas "Bo" Allen died on August 7 at the age of 89. Allen was born into an Arabbing family in Baltimore City. "His love of horses was a result of a gift of a horse and buggy that came from his mother," his daughter, Dorothy Johns, told the Baltimore Sun. Johns and her husband David Johns owns and operated the Bruce Street Stables, a longtime home for Arabbers in Southwest Baltimore. Allen learned the Arabber trade from his mother Mildred Allen who was the first African American female Arabber in Baltimore. The family owned business operated for many years out of the family stables, Whatcoat Street Stables. The Baltimore Sun wrote, "Mr. Allen spent many years clip-clopping up and down city streets and narrow alleys selling fresh vegetables, fruit, fish, clams and crab meat, drawing potential customers with colorful rhythmic yells or howls, many of which date to the 19th century, announcing their day's wares." Allen was known to be a compassionate and generous man, often giving his Social Security check to those in need. When Allen retired, he moved to Elkton but never let go of his love of horses.

Cobey Adam England of Mt. Airy died on August 20 after a motorcycle accident in Ohio. He was 27. He was the son of Judy and Jeff England of England Acres in Mt. Airy. In his youth, England competed in 4-H Horticulture Judging and LifeSmarts and was a strong team player at the local and national level. After graduating from Frederick Community College, England went on to graduate from the University of Maryland with a degree in criminal justice. England also had a passion for dance and won several ballroom dancing competitions. He also loved choreographing and teaching dance.

Pony Club, died on September 3. West was a founding member of Burntwoods Pony Club and previously served as DC for Burntwoods and Vice-RS for the Maryland Region Pony Club. Over the years she developed a vast network of connections to help match kids with ponies and then get them into Pony Club. West was also a nurse and volunteered as the EMT for many rallies. She also taught at Talbot Run Equestrian Center in Mt. Airy. Her son, Matt Langbehn is a graduate H-A.

George E. Emge, Jr.

George E. Emge, Jr. died on September 8. Emge was an active judge for both youth and adult hunter/jumper shows. He was also an active clinician. Outside of the horse world, Emge operated Walker and Emge Construction, which built fences and barns for many homes and training facilities in Baltimore, Carroll and Harford counties.
